Chris Bardis said, "Harness Racing was one of Lloyd's great passions. He accomplished so much for the sport not only in California, but nationwide. He was Mr. Harness Racing.

"He conducted race meetings at Cal Expo, Bay Meadows, Golden Gate Fields, Del Mar, Pomona, Hollywood Park and Los Alamitos. I know of no one else who has had a greater impact on the harness world." and a half while shaving four ticks off his career standard with the 1:55 3/5 final clocking

"I started training for Mr. Nevarez at this meet and I've got six horses for him right now," Edwin noted after Western Devil's victory. "It was nice to get a stakes win with this colt for him.

"Luke knows him now and they make a good team. He gave him a great drive to get a pocket trip and then he had a nice kick in the stretch."

Quevedo noted that Western Ideal is wise beyond his years and that's part of what makes him such a solid performer. "He's the smartest baby I've ever had and acts like an older horse. On top of that, he tries hard and gives his best."

You can't ask for more than that.

The annual announcement of individuals that made the ballot for the Harness Racing Hall of Fame usually sparks a hearty round of conversation. And that talk has become more profound now that social media spreads news and views instantaneously.

People like to express their thoughts about who made the cut each year, but moreover, like to opine about who they thought should have been on the ballot. Everyone has an opinion and any conversation surrounding harness racing is good. But it's important not to lose sight of a few things.

Being elected to the Harness Racing Hall of Fame is the ultimate honor. Selected individuals are considered to be on the same level as Lawrence B. Sheppard,

The criteria needed to be considered includes success on the national stage, integrity, character, contributions to the sport, and sportsmanship. The recipient must meet every one of these points and must have also shown these extraordinary accomplishments over an extended period of time.

Once prospective nominees are submitted by chapters of the U.S. Harness Writers Association (USHWA), they must pass a vigorous four-part vetting process. This includes consideration by an integrity committee, selection committee, Hall of Fame advisory board and finally voting by the eligible members of USHWA.

Sitting behind a horse wasn't Mike Cayouette's first time around a track. Before he found harness racing, Cayouette was active in snowmobile racing.

"We raced on horse tracks; they iced them down in the wintertime and we raced on them," said Cayouette, who lives in Maine.

"(Racing) a snowmobile is a little easier," he added with a laugh. "You've got a little more control with that one."

Solving issues with a snowmobile and making one go fast might be easier, but working with a horse and unraveling the mysteries to each one's success is what drives Cayouette now.

"It's fun with the horses, figuring out what they need to have, need to wear," said Cayouette, who has eight horses in training. "You're learning as much as they're learning."

started his own learning at the U.S. Trotting Association Driving School in 2010. Cayouette owned racehorses for a decade, but wanted to get more involved as a trainer and driver. Since the school, the 59-year-old Cayouette has posted 93 wins as a trainer — including a career-best 22 last year — and 24 victories as a driver.

Seven years after attending the school, Merriman drove one of Cayouette’s home-bred pacers at Ohio’s Northfield Park. Merriman won with the horse, Sinners Prayer, in a then-lifetime-best 1:53 on Feb. 27.

Race 11 News

"That was awesome," Cayouette said.

This year's Driving School will begin Wednesday (May 31), with a welcoming reception/dinner featuring Bob Boni, co-owner of 2016 Horse of the Year Always B Miki.

Participants work alongside grooms and trainers stabled at the fairgrounds Thursday-Saturday mornings. Each afternoon, topics such as horse ownership, veterinary care, driving strategy, training and conditioning and stable management will be covered by guest speakers.

As for Cayouette's biggest accomplishment since the school, he said "just driving is an accomplishment to me." He won 10 of 72 races as a driver in 2012, but has cut back on his driving in recent years.

"In the future I'd really like to have a nice open (level) horse," Cayouette said. "We don't have the better grade of horses, but we get around. My wife (Brenda) loves the horses and is an owner on a lot of them. It's a lot of fun."

Individual Recap Last Race Footnotes

BACK STOCK

Sent under urging, pocket behind fave into turn, stalked, mild traffic, urged to save show. Good post, Luke's choice, gimmick player.

CAPITOL HILL

Moved from back 3rd over past half, suffered when rival stalled, followed 3wide, driven. Not the worst stab.

NUTMEGS DESIRE

Tracked for 3/4s in her return, angled into lane, useful tuner. Should be tighter now. One more player.

MOONSHINEMONKEYS

Led into turn, yielded, tracked, faded out far turn. Noteworthy drop. Wake-up call?

KISS ON THE LIPS

Moved from last 4th over, kicked wide around bad cover, solid rally. Chip's back and she's also usable.

IF YOU SAY SO

Sent to midturn lead, pocket behind winner's retake, chased, driven, 2nd best. Adds to speed equation. Can't rule out either.

ICED OUT

Away well, yielded, stalked to lane, broke, tough to gauge. Adds Dave. Post is her problem.

ETERNAL GRACE

Reserved to far turn, followed winner onto the rim, urged best of the rest. Obvious tactical issues, but not impossible.
