Weep No More For Graded Stakes Committee

by Steve Haskin

The weeping is over. The complaining fruitless. So just accept the direction Thoroughbred Racing is heading. The American Graded Stakes Committee is no doubt comprised of knowledgeable, intelligent people who know what they are doing and follow their formulas and equations with great awareness when juggling graded stakes, especially those rated grade 1.

So when it is concluded that prestigious distance races like the Stephen Foster Handicap and Beldame Stakes no longer are worthy of grade 1 status, along with three other two turn races, and should be replaced by three sprints, who are we to argue. We know what direction we're heading and there is nothing anyone can do about it.

It was decided that the Stephen Foster no longer should have grade 1 status even though five of its winners since 2005 won the Breeders' Cup Classic, the

SOUL DIVA

Parked turn to tuck, around gapper past quarter, chased to lane, urged. Minor post relief here. Slice maybe.

MELODIES THAT ROCK

Caught cover past half, good lead up trip, just a fair return tuner. He could also be a little bit tighter. Small shot.

NIGHTTRAINTOVEGAS

Cover into far turn, angled wide into lane, responded to urging, away late. Luke's choice. Fits well once again. Must use.

SPEAK ENGLISH

Led into turn, brushed back near quarter, opened up last bend, caught deep in the drive. Major player again.

HI FIDELITY

Led into turn, yielded, tracked to lane, urged, no rally. Dean hops aboard. Undercard considerations.

CENALTA ARTISTRY

Cancel-heavy track. In prior mile opening night, she was tough on the rim battling to the very end. Not the worst stab.

BURN MY VILLA

Gapped a little bit in the early going, tipped out first over nearing half, began to stall a little far turn, then broke, disappeared. How ready tonight?

two most recent being in 2017 and 2013, and three of those five were voted Horse of the Year. Another Foster winner in that time frame also won the Santa Anita Handicap and Jockey Club Gold Cup. It is more appropriate to replace it with the Jaipur Stakes, a six-furlong turf race. We get it. And we also get that the races, through some equation, are measured by the overall quality of the field. And it simply was determined that the Stephen Foster, despite producing so many quality winners, was not considered grade 1 material any longer.

As for the Beldame, so what if they demoted a race that since 2010 has been won by champions Elate, Forever Unbridled, Princess of Sylmar, Royal Delta, Havre de Grace, and Life At Ten. It served the sport better to upgrade the Woody Stephens and Churchill Downs Stakes, two more sprints. Point well taken.

grade 1 zen state of mind where frivolous matters are concerned. And I now regard all this as frivolous.

The Stephen Foster, Beldame, Santa Margarita, and Zenyatta Stakes, formerly the Lady's Secret, will survive and go about their business as usual, just as the historic Suburban Handicap has under the grade 2 umbrella, despite being won by a Jockey Club Gold Cup and Whitney winner in 2018, a Travers winner in 2017, a Breeders' Cup Classic runner-up in 2016 and 2015, a two-time Jockey Club Gold Cup winner and Cigar Mile winner in 2013 and 2011, a Breeders' Cup Classic winner in 2012, and a Jockey Club Gold Cup winner in 2010. And we'll add a Breeders' Cup Classic winner, Horse of the Year, and Hall of Famer in 2006.

What's in a grade 1 title anyway? Let's look at it this way: if you removed the "Sir" from Sir Winston Churchill he is still Winston Churchill. No damage in the slightest to his reputation.

So, once again, I am just stating fact with no opinions attached.

Elkton, MD — This is part one of two of the Jeff Fout story. Fout is currently the head trainer at Winbak Farm in Chesapeake City, Md. He also drives, primarily on the Delaware/Maryland circuit. Fout has 4,564 driving wins, and $23,265,101 in career earnings.

Sitting in his office at Winbak Farm in Maryland with a coffee in hand, the longtime horsemen stared at his perfectly conditioned training track. With a bit of a reflecting grin on his face, he admitted he had to be much more than a trainer to deal with yearlings. "I'm like a Doctor Phil," Fout joked. "I'm a psychiatrist, a blacksmith, a trainer, a doctor, and a mechanic all rolled into one."

Fout is in charge of a process called 'breaking,' which is a term that means getting yearlings used to the racing world. Fout trains on a five-eighths-mile training oval, which is located just steps from his office. As many as 45 yearlings can be jogging on the track at one time.

The Jeff Fout story started simple enough.

"I found a girl in high school and thought she was pretty hot," Fout said. "I started dating her and found out that her father raced horses up in Michigan. On weekends, I would go with them to watch her father race."

Her father was Joe Marsh Jr. Marsh, who passed away in 2016, won more than 5,800 races and $36 million. He was one of the leading drivers in the world at the time.

Fout, who liked to race motorcycles and cars at the time, was instantly turned on to harness racing.

After Marsh took him under his wing, Fout eventually quit his job at Whirlpool to make the full-time transition to harness racing.

"They built a brand new factory near me in Ohio, and I would have been in on the ground floor there, probably retired by now," Fout reflects. "It wasn't any fun. Racing is fun. It's something!"

Marsh put Fout right to work, the old fashioned way.

"I was leading broodmares, cleaning stalls, getting my toes stepped on, and smelling like horse manure all day," Fout quipped. He managed to work his way up from groom, to following along in training trips, to eventually driving horses.

"He (Marsh) was such a good guidance to me, and I met a lot of high profile horsemen through him that I forged relationships with," Fout said. "It was important to me not to embarrass him. I worked really hard at it, because I was always told you don't know anything about racing when I started."

When it was time to go on his own, Fout bought his first horse from the Amish for $500. His name was Sam The Timer.

"That horse just seemed to know when I needed money," Fout joked. "He made me look like a way better driver than I was. Most of the time if you didn't hit a tree, you had a good chance to win."

From there, Fout won enough to upgrade his stock.

"I physically like to train 25-45 head per day myself," Fout explained.

Afterwards, the head trainer and his team will pack feet, wrap legs, and feed the horses. Fout also races two-three nights per week, usually at either Dover or Harrington. Sunday is usually a day off, but Fout explains there are always things to do.

The track itself is a five-eighths-mile track with half-mile turns.

"The track has sharp turns and long stretches. We want horses set up to go on the small and large race-tracks," Fout said.

Although the infrastructure is in place, working with young horses presents its share of challenges.

"You have to get them to think right," Fout laughs. "They are like kids out there. Some of them get panic stricken, so the goal is to get them happy and comfortable."

Fout prefers a slow training style when breaking young horses. He explains that it's part of a philosophy to not press hard in the very beginning.

"I don't want them to start off thinking it's like work," Fout said. "I build them up slowly so they are in condition to work, then I will slowly increase the work load."

A lot of the yearlings Fout breaks for Winbak are horses that are called

'keeps.' These are yearlings that weren't sold for a variety of reasons.

"It's kind of like raising kids," Fout said. "You take pride in bringing along a horse that was a slow learner."

Despite the many challenges that goes along with teaching young horses the ropes, Fout continues to enjoy his time at Winbak Farm.

"Mr. Thomson has accumulated a real good team to work with," Fout said. "Everyone here knows their job inside and out."

Fout explained that first and foremost, everyone that works at Winbak loves horses.

"I don't know if I ever met someone that loves horses more than Mr. Thomson," Fout said. "Mr. Thomson and his team spend a lot of money and time on care of horses. They spend a lot of resources to make sure that these yearlings have the possible chance of becoming great race horses."
